A Word from the Founder

I have a strong belief that sport is a human right and our organisation is on the right track to deliver on this vision through its work across the globe.

As 2018 came to a close, Save the Dream opened a new chapter with more community-oriented projects and a roadmap to becoming an organisation which serves both children and young people at a local and global level.

2018 was a memorable year for Save the Dream and its partners as we used major sporting events e.g. the FIFA World Cup in Russia, to ensure that children from underprivileged communities, such as those in Moscow were able to be part of a global event happening on their doorsteps.

As we have witnessed from previous years where we have taken part in FIFA World Cups and Olympic Games, it was rewarding to see the benefits of the inclusivity of local communities.

While we think about communities and inclusivity as citizens of the global community, we are facing the humanitarian challenge that is taking its toll primarily on children. We are seeing a whole generation who are growing up in refugee camps where they are deprived of their right to play. It is with this reason, that we have launched our Save the Dream Sport for Peace and Development initiative which saw its first project taking place in Darfur, Sudan this year.

In 2019, we are looking forward to more projects that will again target the refugee communities and specifically in the areas that lack international aid. Through the knowledge and skills, we have gained in the past years, we are making sure that these are extended and multiplied through other people who share the same passion as we do.

Our team has organised and actively engaged in several workshops and training courses where we delivered our message on the right of youth to have safe access to sport and its educational values, such as at United Nations Alliance of Civilizations Global Forum in United Nations Headquarters in New York, the International Volunteer Forum in Kazan, Russia and the latest Global Education Training Course for Youth Multipliers held in Molina, Spain, by the North-South Centre of the Council of Europe.

We are excited about our plans for 2019 with new large-scale projects, delivered through our long-standing partners and some new friends, that will benefit communities and children across the world.

I take this opportunity to thank all those organisations who have supported Save the Dream financially or in-kind throughout this past year and acknowledge in particular the Qatar Fund for Development, Qatar Charity, Qatar Airways, Ooredoo, Qatar Financial Center and SASOL.

A special thank goes to the Qatar Olympic Committee and its President H E Sheikh Joaan bin Hamad Al Thani for his support to Save the Dream since the launch of Save the Dream in 2012, to the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy, the Qatar Football Association, the Qatar Stars League and Aspire Academy for making available their expertise in the course of our international projects.

I also wish to thank all the organisations we have worked with in the course of the year within the framework of the Erasmus+ Sport programme and all those partners who have help us achieve our goals, particularly the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations (UNAOC), the International Olympic Truce Center (IOTC), the International University Sports Federation (FISU), the Directorate for Sports and Social Projects in Kazan and the Ministry of Sport of the Republic of Iraq.

Thank you,

Mohammed Hanzab

THE WAY FORWARD

2018 brought Save the Dream closer to meeting its ambitions to work with youth leaders from very diverse countries and socio-economic background.

We have found the same enthusiasm and commitment to make a positive change in society through sport in student-athletes enrolled in universities all around the world as well as in young women and young men living in refugee camps and in camps hosting Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs).

We have operated under important international frameworks such as the Sustainable Development Goals and UNESCO Kazan Action Plan, and promoted activities, particularly within youth, to facilitate the implementation of these instruments at the grass-roots level.

In 2019, Save the Dream will continue its work to place different stakeholders, including and particularly youth leaders and other multipliers, in the best possible position to build more fair and inclusive societies through the safe access to sport and its values and to address issues such as discrimination, intolerance, violent extremism, violence and youth disengagement.

Jointly with our partners from the United Nations' system, the Olympic Movement and civil society, we will start working on the development of a possible international framework on sport volunteerism.

In particular, 2019 will mark the start of EU funded project which will allow Save the Dream and its partners to implement the project "Empowering Youth Volunteers through Sport (EYVOL)", with the aim to promote, through sport, new forms of employability, youth mobility and inter-cultural dialogue.

In parallel, we will continue to strengthen our role in sport in crisis situations where there is no time to wait for others to take action, where a rapid action is most needed to protect the innocence of the most vulnerable ones.

2019 will mark the 30th Anniversary of the Fall of the Berlin Wall. Under this umbrella, we will initiate a global campaign on how sport can break down walls and engage youth leaders from all around the world to promote together the concept of global citizenship while building bridges across diverse people and nations.
